He added that the Western community continues to display its resilience with its ability to adapt to circumstances with understanding and compassion. He articulated his deep gratitude for faculty, staff, and student's ability to pivot in ways that were thought not to be possible, and with the guidance of the COVID Support Team, to continue learning and supporting each other in the process.

Randhawa thanked Shirin Deylami, Faculty Senate President, who worked collaboratively with Provost Carbajal as Western navigated the complexities over the past two years of the global pandemic. Randhawa also thanked Glory Busic, Associated Students President, for her service and commitment to Western.

Randhawa reflected on the work accomplished throughout the academic year that allowed for continued work on advancing critical needs and Western's long-term priorities. Randhawa noted that Western's enrollment data for fall of 2021 was encouraging and Western seems well poised to return to pre-COVID enrollment numbers for fall 2022.

Randhawa reported that strong support of the supplemental legislative session continues to reflect the confidence of legislators in Western's ability to deliver on its mission and commitment. He added that work continues developing Western's physical infrastructure that is so critical to support the growth in Western's academic programs and student support services, which includes the opening of Alma Clark Glass Hall and the Interdisciplinary Science Building.

Randhawa highlighted important systems and structures that were put into place over the past academic year that include, a Sustainability Council that will work with the Sustainability

Engagement Institute and the campus community to refresh the 2017 Sustainability Action Plan and redefine Western's immediate priorities. He noted the signing of the Okanagan Charter that makes health and wellness central to all of work at Western, and a strategic budgeting planning process that reframes how Western budgets its institutional priorities, that includes a university budget committee that will provide oversight to the overall budgeting process.

5. FACULTY SENATE REPORT

Shirin Deylami, Faculty Senate President reported the following:

Good morning, Trustees and happy end of spring quarter. I'm very much looking forward to all 8 graduations. Thank you again for the opportunity to speak with you today to update you on faculty governance at the university and to give you a report at the end of my terms as faculty senate president.

Professor Lysa Rivera will be taking over this job in a few short days. Professor Rivera is an associate professor of English whose research and teaching focus on Chicana and African American literature. She has been an excellent vice-president and I have no doubt will do a great job as president. In her place as VP, Professor Brandon Dupont of the Economics department will be the new Vice president and president elect of the Senate. Professor Dupont has a ton of experience in faculty governance and is excited to get started.

As the end of the year came quickly, we managed to finish quite a bit in Senate and have many issues to improve upon in the next year. As you know, much of the discussion amongst senators and colleges and departments has been around modality. We are now starting to see the modality plans of some of the colleges and we hope that all of the colleges will have modality guidance by fall. The Senate also recently approved to important policies forwarded to us from the Academic Coordinating Commission. We now have a temporary modality policy and after much going back and forth we have a new credit hour policy that provides standards for both in person and remote (specifically asynchronous) courses.

On the teaching front, we recently approved a new grade for the grading system. The IP or in progress grade is meant to address problems students were having as they finished their student teaching in the college of education and in study abroad courses that went on for longer than our normal quarters. Rather than using the K or incomplete grade, faculty can now give those students an in-progress grade until their commitments are completed. In addition we have begun discussions about rethinking or at least improving both the Z and K grade options and policies. I think this will be an important priority in the fall.

As far as things to look forward to in the next year, the Faculty Senate intends to implement new course evaluations with new questions in the fall. We are also planning a major change to the Faculty Code of Ethics. Finally, and I think this is important for the Board of Trustees as well, we hope to change some of our governing documents including the Faculty Handbook which is a contract between the trustees, administration and faculty as well as our constitution.

That's all I have for you today, other than to thank you for your time and tell you how pleased I have been to serve as the Senate president.

6. ASSOCIATED STUDENTS REPORT

Glory Basic, Associated Students President, reported that the Associated Students (AS) Executive Board has worked strategically and thoughtfully throughout the academic year to advocate for student needs at Western.

Basic thanked the Associated Students Executive Board and noted her pride in the work of the AS student government's ability to work together and make change at Western even during a global pandemic. She noted that despite the challenges the Executive Board faced, their work to collaboratively represent student voices was always at the mission of their work.

Basic acknowledged her gratitude for the opportunity to serve as AS President and the opportunity to work in collaboration with the Board of Trustee and other executive leadership at Western. She noted that in the upcoming academic year she will serve as the Vice President of Communications for the Washington Student Associate and will continue to advocate for student needs at the state level.

7. BOARD FINANCE, AUDIT, AND ENTERPRISE RISK MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE

Trustee Sue Sharpe, Finance, Audit, and Enterprise Risk Management (FARM) Committee reported Western's Executive Director of Audit & Consulting Services, Amy Kozak, is providing the department with leadership to reframe the position and its relationship with the campus community. Sharpe reported that Audit & Consulting Services has started a reassessment of audit plans, consulting and advisory services, campus community committee engagements, continued work with the National Association of College and University Auditor's and campus presentations.

Sharpe reported that the committee received a presentation on auxiliary facility conditions that includes Housing and Dining and the Wade King Recreation Center that receive funding from student fees and are not funded by the state budget. Sharpe thanked Melynda Huskey, Vice President for Enrollment and Student Service and Joyce Lopes, Vice President for Business and Financial Affairs for their leadership and dedication to keeping the trustees informed.

8. BOARD STUDENT SUCCESS COMMITTEE REPORT

Trustee Mo West, Chair, Student Success Committee, (SSC) reported that Dr. David Patrick, Dean of the Graduate School and Vice Provost for Research, gave a presentation titled, "Graduate Education at Western: Where We've Been, Are, and Hope to Be." West noted that Patrick summarized that Western offers several graduate-level certificates, about three dozen professional and academic master's degree programs, and two professional doctorate programs in Bellingham and at locations around Puget Sound. Each program serves distinct student and stakeholder populations, and graduate admissions is de-centralized.

West reported that long-term trends in graduate enrollment and degree conferral. Graduate enrollment has steadily declined from 10% - 15% of total enrollment to under 5% prior to the pandemic. Western ranks near the bottom of its peer group in the percentage of degrees awarded at the postgraduate level. Drivers of the trend include: (i) a slightly greater rate of program closures compared to new program launches combined with roughly static enrollment in continuing programs, (ii) insufficient marketing and recruiting for graduate programs, (iii) less attractive TA stipends and graduate student services offerings. On average, programs have been under-enrolling by 15% - 25% of capacity and attracting a decreasing share of prospective students with no prior WWU association. The first two years of the pandemic produced large application and enrollment increases, in line with national trends. Preliminary projections for Fall 22 suggest that peak has passed, and that enrollment is again returning to its long-term trend. Impacts of declining graduate enrollment on undergraduate learning opportunities, faculty recruitment, Washington impact, and university research were discussed.

Trustee West summarized that budget initiatives being prepared for the 22-23 legislative session which include two components for graduate education: (1) a package of new degree programs centered in STEM and the environment, and (2) a package of “graduate infrastructure” initiatives designed to address underlying enrollment drivers including marketing and recruitment, outreach to underserved prospective student populations, TA compensation, and graduate student success.

9. REFLECTIONS & FUTURE DIRECTIONS: UNIVERSITY ADVANCEMENT & UNIVERSITY RELATIONS AND MARKETING

Kim O’Neill, Vice President for University Advancement provided the Board an overview of the changes to the divisional structure, current progress, and future direction of University Advancement, the Western Washington University Foundation and the Alumni Association.

O’Neill provided an update on the reorganization of University Advancement that include three new leadership positions that will allow for elevated principal gifts to be managed by the leadership team. O’Neill highlighted that work that continues with regards to capital campaigns that include the Salish Longhouse and the Kaiser Borsari Hall projects and fundraising for the year totaled sixteen million dollars in revenue meeting the goals set for the academic year.

O’Neill explained that within University Advancement consists of two separate 501 C3 boards that consist of passionate volunteers that work to advance Western’s mission. She noted that historically these two boards have worked independently of one another and going forward the goal is to have them work in tandem to advance the mission of University Advancement and meet the strategic plan goals of Western.

Donna Gibbs, Vice President for University Relations and Marketing, provided an overview the division including the strategic goals; cultivate positive relationships within and between the campus and our communities, promote a more inclusive culture, increase campus and public understanding of the Western brands, support top-of-funnel recruitment, proactively and effectively tell Western’s story, and collaboratively improve economic vitality in local communities and beyond.

Gibbs noted one of the challenges faced by University Relations and Marketing (URM), which is the smallest of the five divisions that make up Western. She noted that URM has historically not had the opportunity to replace or add positions, but after the global pandemic, the opportunity to hire and recruit became a priority. Gibbs noted that URM will welcome a new Director of University Communications in August 2022, in addition to a new Director of University Marketing and Brand Strategy and Director of Visual Media Production.

Gibbs highlighted the work of the Small Business Development Center led by C.J. Seitz and a team of advisors who throughout the pandemic and then the historic flooding that took place in Whatcom County, assisted small businesses with the Federal and State economic recovery that led to a grant that made local businesses eligible for emergency funding.

Gibbs reported that over the past five years Western has been developing and improving Western's web site accessibility by creating website tool and technology to make Westerns web sites more accessible to people with disabilities. She noted that Western's web technology team has trained more that three hundred and fifty students and staff on accessibility content creation, that includes tools and guides.

Gibbs reported that Chris Roselli, Director, Community Relations, is organizing a community wide Accessibility, Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (ADEI) focused advisory team whose membership includes members from the Bellingham Technical College, Whatcom Community College, Northwest Indian College, Skagit Valley College, Bellingham Public Schools, PeaceHealth, and the City of Bellingham.
